

Application No. 242: Secret drawer

Author: Juan Carlos Ortega Sánchez, Morelia Mich, Mexico

How a resourceful Mexican protects his valuables

In Mexico people are a little wary of strangers in their house (housekeepers, workers, babysitters, etc.). That's why they have to think of new ways to hide their jewellery and cash safely.

A totally normal cabinet - you would think

I utilized the space in the cabinet between the lowest shelf and the floor and fitted in a new drawer of the same wood.

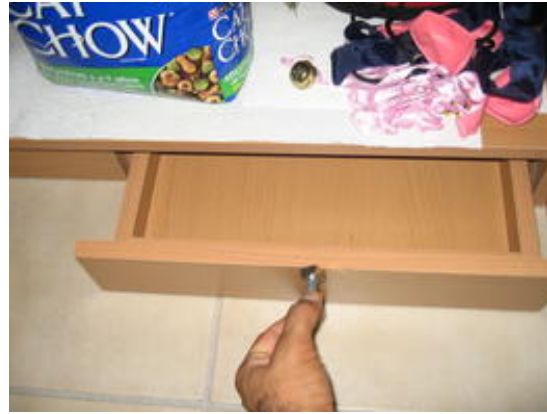

It looks just like a normal drawer, except there is a sunk-in screw instead of a handle. From the front it looks like it's part of the cabinet.

With the aid of a block magnet (www.supermagnete.de/eng/Q-15-15-08-N) on a metal piece I can still open the drawer.

In my house, pilferers don't stand a chance!

Magic? No, supermagnete!

Note: The whole thing becomes even niftier when you sink another magnet into the inside of your drawer. The effort is a little higher, but then the drawer is practically invisible!
